WIDE AWARR. Webster's Reply to Hayno.

Few perhaps are aware that the preservation of the memorable speech of Webster in reply to Hayne in the United States Senate is due to a lady, the accomplished wife of Mr. Gales of the National Intelligencer. The following interesting reminiscence of the speech and the report of it, is from the Gazette, published at Taunton, Mamachusetts:

It will be seen from this interesting narrative that there was a time when Joseph Gales stood alone among Congressional reporters; and to still further illustrate his position in that line we call to mind what we once heard an intimate friend of Mr. Webster say we owed to him and his wife with regard to the elebrated reply to Mr. Hayne. Meeting the Massachusetts Senator as he was going to th Capitol on that morning, Mr. Gales inquired of him how long he intended to speak.-About half an hour, was the reply. The editor's duties at that time were pressing; but he ventured to take so much time from them. Mr. Webster, however, directly after met Judge Story, who said that he thought the time had come to give to the country his views on the constitution. To this proposition he assented. Mr. Gales took up his pencil, unaware of this new arrangement, and slike unconscious of the lapse of time with the lapse of time will consume about twenty thousand toothpicks in three weeks.—Commercial Advertiser.
